On April 17, 2011, Justin Amorratanasuchad was doing what he loved most – filming – when he died in a tragic accident. Justin, 21, was a junior in the film program at Emerson College at the time. He had been accepted for his senior year internship program in Los Angeles.

Justin was a gifted filmmaker, winning national and international awards while attending Ballard High School in Seattle, where he graduated in 2008. Among these recognitions was a Student Television Award for Excellence from the Northwest Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, presented at the regional Emmy Awards. Thanks to his high school's video production program and awards like this, Justin built a portfolio that gained him acceptance into prestigious film schools.

To honor the creative energy Justin brought to the world, his family and friends have established a scholarship fund for advanced studies in film and television. It will provide assistance to graduates of Puget Sound area high school video production programs who have the talent but need financial assistance to pursue their dreams, like Justin.

JDogg FILM SCHOOL SCHOLARSHIP 2019

The Justin Amorratanasuchad (JDogg) Scholarship Fund is pleased to offer a scholarship award to graduating high school student(s) in the Puget Sound area who plans to pursue post-secondary studies in film/tv/media.
